

Ft. Christanna

(From Neal 1975)

The fort was pentagonal in shape, with each side one hundred yards long, made of split trees wedged in the earth. At every corner was a bastion house, each with a 1,400 pound cannon. Inside were a number of buildings to house the twelve rangers, the Indian school, and for trade items, animals and storage. A well on the property provided water.

Conceptual Rendering, 2004 by John W. Kincheloe, III

First map known to show Fort Christanna
Virginia Marylandia et Carolina, c. 1714
by J. B. Homann, courtesy Library of Congress