

Robinson - a few minutes afterwards I saw Mr. Robinson and told him if he owed Dr. Gorham any money to pay it - that it was for me and I wanted it - Robinson replied that he did not owe Dr. Gorham any thing - very soon afterwards I told Dr. Gorham what Robinson said and he Gorham took from his pocket two bonds, one signed by Robinson in the sum of about six or seven hundred dollars, and the other, I think signed by Robinson - a short time afterwards I saw Robinson and told him that Gorham held bonds against him, to which he replied that he knew Gorham had the bonds against him, but on a settlement between them he thought Gorham would be in his debt - all this ~~and on the same day~~

John G. Floyd being here first duly sworn - says - that sometime in March 1858, W. W. Robinson came to my house and desired me to send a letter to James W. Gorham - Robinson wrote a letter to Gorham and read it to me - in the letter Robinson stated to Gorham, that the note he had received from P. N. Gorham, was disputed by him, and he Robinson could not pay it - I sent this letter to Mr. Gorham by one of my servants, but do not know that Gorham received it - and further affidavit sayeth not

P. J. Gorham being here first duly sworn - says - that sometime in the year 1858 - I heard W. W. Robinson ask James

Mr. Gorham, whether he received from him Robinson, a letter sent through Mr. J. G. Floyd <sup>stating that he would not pay that</sup> and Gorham stated that he did receive it - and that he Robinson had as well pay the bond, that he would have it to do - I understand from this conversation, they were talking of a law which P. N.
Gorham had applied to J. M. Gorham against Robinson and further affidavit sayeth not -

Boggs & Garrison

William J. Collin being here first duly sworn - says - that on the first Sunday in April 1858 - I was at Mr. J. M. Gorham's, in company with James W. Gorham and others, and Gorham stated that Wright - Robinson had as much as ever - that he had executed his note to Perry Gorham, and that Mr. James Gorham had traded for it - and named the subject to Robinson who agreed to pay him at Buffalo, sole provided Perry would pay him, Robinson <sup>and</sup> that Robinson had written him a note and sent it by one of John Floyd's negroes, stating that he could not pay a cent of it - that Mr. James Gorham had traded it to his brother Thomas Gorham, and that his brother Thomas had carried it to William H. Collier who gave him the money for it, and he recollects the gentleman would be sued for it - and further affidavit sayeth not - W. J. Collier

The taking of further deposition is continued to the 27th day of April at the place mentioned in the caption - Hartwell Hardinge J.P.
